Liu's plan would make weed legal in New York

Big buzz. The comptroller releases a report that calls for legalizing marijuana.

John Liu's proposal would allow New Yorkers to possess up to an ounce of marijuana. / GETTY IMAGES

Marijuana legalization advocates have some hard numbers on their side, thanks to a report from the Office of the City Comptroller.

Comptroller John Liu announced a proposal on Aug. 14 that would make marijuana legal in New York City: New Yorkers 21 and older would be permitted to possess up to one ounce of marijuana.

Liu delivered some shocking statistics. For instance, in the Bronx, approximately one percent of the entire adult population was arrested for low-level marijuana possession in 2012.

"Most of those arrested are under 25 years old," Liu said. "Just getting started, And many will suffer for the rest of their lives."

Both Liu and Gabriel Sayegh with the Drug Policy Alliance emphasized the racial disparity in marijuana arrests as well. The proportion of white New Yorkers and black and Hispanic New Yorkers who use marijuana are roughly the same, but black and Hispanic New Yorkers make up 86 percent of pot-related arrests while white New Yorkers only account for 11 percent.

Liu's proposal likens the regulation of marijuana with that of alcohol, and the current situation to the era of Prohibition.

"Look how badly the prohibition of alcohol worked," Liu said. "It drove alcohol and the people who wanted to consume it into the hands of gangsters operating in an underground environment."

Liu's proposal is supported by Joanne Naughton, a petite, white-haired former NYPD lieutenant who used to work undercover in narcotics.

"I went out on the streets and I bought heroin and cocaine and pills and everything else," Naughton said. "Decades ago — and we're still doing it. What we did then and what we're doing now doesn't work. If it worked, we wouldn't be here; we wouldn't have a problem."

Naughton shrugged off the notion that some people won't want to buy marijuana legally, because they won't want to be perceived as a marijuana user, particularly those with employers who may frown on marijuana use.

"They'll have to make changes," Naughton insisted.

She allowed that "there will be a period of time where kinks will have to be worked out," but said legalizing the substance would serve to reduce and eventually eliminate the stigma that leads to furtive use.

Liu's plan would legalize marijuana in New York City. / GETTY IMAGES

Harsh laws

"Were President Obama a law school student in New York City today, using marijuana as he did at that time, it would be very likely that he would be stopped, questioned, illegally searched and potentially arrested for marijuana."

Man stabbed to death in Brooklyn

A 39-year-old man was found stabbed to death inside the lobby of a Brooklyn public housing project on Aug. 13, cops said.

Police found John Reeves, of Bedford-Stuyvesant, with multiple stab wounds to his chest inside the Whitman Houses in Fort Greene around 10:40 p.m.

Emergency personnel transported Reeves to Brooklyn Hospital Center, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

No arrests have been made so far. Police said that the investigation is ongoing.

Anti-gay assault in Chelsea

Police are reporting an apparent anti-gay assault that happened in Chelsea on Aug. 13 at 12:10 a.m.

According to police reports, the victims were two men, ages 27 and 53, who were holding hands on their walk home from the movies.

Cops said that the victims were confronted by two teenagers, who demanded: "What are you looking at, you f—g f—ts?"

The situation reportedly escalated into fisticuffs, with four additional attackers joining the fray and helping beat up the two victims.

One of the victims suffered swelling and cuts to the left side of his face, and the other had a gash on his chin that required seven stitches.

Group protests killing of Staten Island turkeys

Bird is the word. GooseWatch NYC is rallying after some turkeys were taken and euthanized.

A group known for rounding up geese in an attempt to save them from slaughter rallied in Staten Island Wednesday to protest the removal of the borough's wild turkeys from the grounds of a mental health facility.

On Monday and Tuesday, several of the birds were taken from the grounds of the South Beach Psychiatric Center and euthanized at a food processing facility by U.S. Department of Agriculture's Wildlife Services division, according to multiple outlets.

Though the psychiatric center asked for federal help with the bird population — citing health concerns from their waste — GooseWatch NYC still decried the government's actions.

Members of GooseWatch NYC, City Council candidate John Mancuso and several community leaders, spoke out against the killings at the health facility.

Vote. Spitzer leads with majority in race

With black voters hoisting him up, former Governor Eliot Spitzer is leading with more than 50 percent of likely Democratic primary voters in the City Comptroller race.

Of 579 likely primary voters, Spitzer leads Manhattan Borough President Scott Stringer 56 to 37 percent, according to a Quinnipiac University poll released Wednesday.

While the survey showed no gender gap, Spitzer's lead is boosted by black voters, with 68 percent of those polled choosing him.

Assault. Corrections officer charged with rape in attack: NYPD

A Department of Corrections officer is charged with rape, criminal use of a firearm, assault and unlawful imprisonment after a domestic assault on Aug. 13, cops said.

Officer Eddie Colon, 49, was arrested at 2:11 a.m., police reported.

Cops identified the victim as a 31-year-old woman. Because of the sexual nature of the alleged crime, police will not provide further information about her.

Police said Colon attempted to forcibly sexually assault the victim and when she resisted, he held a gun to her head.

Cops said after Colon raped the woman, she tried to escape the apartment. Colon reportedly punched her in her stomach and ribs.

Colon was off-duty at the time of the alleged attack, which took place at an apartment in Brownsville, police reported.

City will commission local design projects

Creative makeover. The program's goal is to help boost the design industry in New York City.

The city aims to stimulate the local design economy through a new program launched Aug. 14.

Built/NYC will commission designs from local firms and designers for city capital projects such as parks and municipal offices, officials said.

"Instead of automatically purchasing a desk, a lighting fixture or other furnishings made in another country, we can allow the city to purchase products that have been designed and manufactured right here in the five boroughs," City Council Speaker Christine Quinn said. The pilot program is meant to help established and emerging New York City designers.

Initially, the city is accepting design applications for furniture, lighting, textiles and other items for public buildings.

The city will award projects in the fall.

The initiative is funded through $400,000 from City Council, and designers from the five boroughs are encouraged to participate.

Plane crash. Pilots killed in UPS accident

A large UPS cargo plane crashed and burst into flames early Wednesday, Aug. 14, on approach to the airport in Birmingham, Ala., killing the pilot and co-pilot in the latest in a series of aviation accidents in the United States this year.

"I can confirm they were killed in the crash," Birmingham Mayor William Bell said of the pilot and co-pilot, who were not identified immediately. He added that there were no other casualties reported.

United Parcel Service Inc. flight 1354, en route from Louisville, Ky., to Birmingham, crashed at about 5 a.m. CDT, according to the Federal Aviation Administration. The plane was identified as an Airbus A300. REUTERS

The likely deaths and damage are the worst blow to the navy since a 1971 war with Pakistan.

Clashes in Egypt result in over 200 deaths

Egyptian security forces crushed a protest camp of thousands of supporters of the deposed president on Wednesday, Aug. 14, shooting dead scores of people in the bloodiest day in decades in the Arab world's biggest country.

The health ministry said 235 people were killed, both in Cairo and in clashes that broke out elsewhere in the country. Deposed president Mohamed Morsi's Muslim Brotherhood said the death toll was far higher in what it described as a "massacre."

While dead bodies wrapped in carpets were carried to a makeshift morgue near the Rabaa al-Adawiya mosque, the army-backed rulers declared a one-month state of emergency, restoring to the military the unfettered power it wielded for decades before a pro-democracy uprising in 2011.

A supporter of the Muslim Brotherhood and Egypt's ousted president Mohamed Morsi shoots fireworks toward police during clashes in Cairo on Aug. 14. / GETTY IMAGES

Thousands of Morsi's supporters had been camped at two major sites in Cairo since before he was toppled on July 3 and had vowed not to leave the streets until he was returned to power.

Violence spread beyond Cairo, with Morsi supporters and security forces clashing in the cities of Alexandria, Minya, Assiut, Fayoum and Suez, as well as in Buhayra and Beni Suef provinces.

With the assault on the camps, the authorities have ended the six-week standoff with a show of state force that defied international pleas for restraint. REUTERS

Legal. Pentagon unveils benefits for married same-sex couples

The Pentagon on Wednesday, Aug. 14, announced its plan to extend benefits to same-sex spouses of uniformed military personnel and civilian employees, in response to the Supreme Court ruling in June forcing the federal government to recognize same-sex marriages in states where they are legal.

The Defense Department will make spousal and family benefits available by Sept. 3 to same-sex spouses as long as a valid marriage certificate is presented, the Pentagon said in a statement.

"The Department of Defense remains committed to ensuring that all men and women who serve in the U.S. military, and their families, are treated fairly and equally as the law directs," it said. REUTERS

Former Illinois congressman Jesse Jackson Jr., once one of the most promising black politicians in the United States, was sentenced on Wednesday, Aug. 14, to two and a half years in prison for misuse of campaign funds.

Jackson, a former Democratic representative and the son of civil rights leader the Rev. Jesse Jackson Sr., apologized before U.S. District Judge Amy Berman Jackson sentenced him.

"I misled the American people," Jackson said, wiping away tears. "I also want to apologize to my dad and my mother."

Quoted

"I take responsibility for my actions, and I'm very sorry for what I have done." Jackson

His wife, Sandi, a former Chicago City Council member, was sentenced to one year for falsifying tax returns that failed to report the campaign money as income. The couple has two children. The judge ordered Jackson Jr. to report to prison on or after Nov. 1 and for Sandi Jackson to report to prison 30 days after he is released to reduce the impact on the children.

"I stand before you today asking for mercy," Sandi Jackson said, adding that "my heart breaks every day with the pain it has caused my babies."

Jackson Jr. asked on Aug. 12 that the judge recommend to the Bureau of Prisons that he serve his time at a federal prison in Montgomery, Ala., because it would allow him to be nearer to his wife and children, who live in Washington, D.C. The judge said at sentencing she would make that recommendation. REUTERS

Manning tells court he's 'sorry' for secrets breach

Court. Manning was convicted of 20 charges, including espionage and theft, on July 30.

Soldier Bradley Manning on Wednesday told a military court "I'm sorry" for giving war logs and diplomatic secrets to the WikiLeaks website three years ago, the biggest breach of classified data in U.S. history.

"I'm sorry I hurt people. I'm sorry that I hurt the United States," the 25-year-old U.S. Army Pfc. told the sentencing phase of his court martial. "I'm apologizing for the unexpected results of my actions. The last three years have been a learning experience for me."

Manning faces up to 90 years in prison for providing more than 700,000 documents, battle videos and diplomatic cables to WikiLeaks.

"I understand I must pay a price for my decisions," Manning continued in his first lengthy public statement since February.

Defense lawyers making a case for a milder sentence sought to show the judge that the soldier's superiors ignored signs of mental stress, with an Army psychologist testifying that Manning felt isolated because he was wrestling with his gender identity. REUTERS

Oprah Winfrey is not a control freak

Interview. The Oscar nominee comes back to the big screen for the first time since "Beloved."

Taking direction

"What is exciting about him and why we love him is, he is a truth-seeker. He will not let any of his actors get away with a single breath that's a false moment. I can testify to that. He doesn't allow you as an actor get away with anything that's remotely fake. And if you do he'll yell, 'Fake!'"

Oprah, on director Lee Daniels

There was one major reason Oprah Winfrey returned to screen acting for her first prominent role since 1998's "Beloved." His name is Lee.

Winfrey worked with director/producer Lee Daniels behind the scenes of his breakout film, "Precious," which she also executive produced. She was coerced in front of the camera for his fourth effort, "Lee Daniels' The Butler," playing the wife of a man (Forest Whitaker) who works at the White House from the 1950s through the '80s.

"I wanted the opportunity to be in his hands, really," she says. She said he was relentless in pursuing her. "I was telling him, 'Lee, I got a network thing going on!' But he wouldn't listen to me. He'd been stalking me for some time."

Of course, there was also the subject. The film spans the beginning of the civil rights movement and ends with Obama's election. "I'm a historian of my own history — of African-American history. I believe that when you know who you are, you have the ability to move forward not only with your own strength, but with the strength of your entire ancestry," Winfrey says.

While specifically about black culture — and in a way that doesn't portray it through white eyes, despite a Caucasian screenwriter (Danny Strong) — it's also, she says, universal. "You see the two of us at the bus station sending our son off to college. That's how every parent, regardless of race, regardless of economic background, feels when you have to let go of your son."

In "Lee Daniels' The Butler," Oprah Winfrey gets her first film role since 1998's "Beloved."
GETTY IMAGES FOR HEARST

There's also her character: the long-suffering wife of a workaholic, who spends her days drinking. "I thought a lot about what it meant to be a woman in the '50s and '60s. All of us got a lot of fire inside us. What is it like to have that fire but have nothing to do with it? You can't just sit around watching 'The Edge of Night' all day long, make a sandwich, have a beer, tiptoe with the next-door neighbor," Winfrey explains. "This gave me the opportunity to show the women of that era. Gloria is not just herself, but a composite of the women of the era who sacrificed themselves to become the stabilizing forces of their families."

Forest Whitaker plays The Butler and Winfrey is his (somewhat) faithful wife. /ANNE MARIE FOX

On her notoriety

"Contrary to what everyone assumes about me, I'm really not a control freak. I like to hire someone who knows what they're doing so I don't have to do it. Then they come back to me and tell me it's done. That's how I like to operate."

In terms of race relations today, Winfrey says she's the same Oprah for both white and black audiences. "I feel I have made a living being myself. I've made a career out of my own authenticity. I don't have one face I present to the white world or to the black world. I talk to my dogs the same way I'm speaking right now."

But she understands that her being able to feel that way was hard-earned by others. "I am the daughter of a maid, and my grandmother was a maid, and her mother was a maid, and her mother was a slave," she says. "I feel validated by the war that the butler and his entire generation fought in their own way — and the fact that there's another generation of freedom writers and freedom fighters that, because of evolution and growth and change, decided they weren't going to do that anymore. Both wars were necessary for their times."

'Paranoia': Dial 'M' for moronic

Just because a movie is set in the world of adults doesn't mean it's not childish. In "Paranoia," a young tech whiz (Liam Hemsworth) gets blackmailed by a cell phone CEO (Gary Oldman) into spying on another (a hairless Harrison Ford). Not since undercover agent Ryan Phillippe was able to gain the confidence of seasoned fed Chris Cooper in "Breach" has a painfully wooden actor been so mysteriously capable at expert subterfuge. Hemsworth is younger brother to "Thor"'s Chris, and he lacks his build, presence and modest chops. Dumb twists abound, but one would have to be thick, not paranoid, to not see them coming. MATT PRIGGE

Sequel needs more Hit-Girl

Comics comeback. The second "Kick-Ass" fails to build on the first and wastes Jim Carrey.

Aaron Taylor-Johnson and Chloe Grace Moretz strut their stuff in "Kick-Ass 2." / DANIEL SMITH

Mark Millar's "Kick-Ass" comics are "Watchmen" where the makeshift not-so-superheroes actually get to kick ass. They have no significant neuroses. There is only a superficial deconstruction of comics. Early on in the movie sequel, the new guardian (Morris Chestnut) of pint-sized vigilante Hit-Girl (Chloe Grace Moretz) voices an understandable concern: A little girl ought not to be masquerading as a violent avenger. She should go to the school she usually skips.

Not that it ever means to meaningfully explore this idea; it's just mere meat to feed the plot. Dito the main thread, which follows nerve-frayed teen Kick-Ass (Aaron Taylor-Johnson) as he joins a gang of copycat would-be vigilantes. Their leader is a twist on Captain America: a demented, born-again sadist played by Jim Carrey. It's a mild spoiler to reveal that Carrey gets little to do and is given no chance to establish his presence beyond a gruff New York accent and a fake nose.

The villain this time is the son of the previous one: Christopher Mintz-Plasse's mafia scion has rechristened himself the S&M-garbed "The Motherf—er." He's out to avenge his father, killed by Kick-Ass in the first via rocket launcher. Again, this possibly trenchant storyline — the hero becoming someone else's villain — is only there to give the audience a rise. Like all the other shocking things that happen in "Kick-Ass 2" — including a couple significant deaths — it happens, it's forgotten and it's on to the next shocking twist.

Millar was recently (and justly) upbraided when he defended the repeated use of rape in his comics, saying they were just there as plot points to get readers angry at the perpetrators. This obliviousness carries through on to the films. The first was peppy enough it more or less got a pass. "Kick-Ass 2" needed to deepen the world, but it only makes it slightly grittier. It slightly atones with a Brigitte Nielsen-esque Amazon villain (Olga Kurkulina), who brings forth the only set piece worth remembering in six months.

HARRISON FORD

Sorry, nerds — we asked Harrison Ford zero questions about "Star Wars" or "Indiana Jones."

PLAYING THE BAD GUY

Harrison Ford isn't as terrifying to talk to as you might have heard. Over the years he's gotten a reputation as gruff, pissy, transparently wishing he was somewhere else. This isn't completely true — as long as your questions aren't too dumb, and especially if they aren't about "Star Wars" or "Indiana Jones." Now 71, he's relaxed into supporting or at least co-lead roles, which he continues as one of the villains in the tech-world thriller "Paranoia."

This is another film about technology, about which you've voiced negative opinions in the past.
I'm just not a huge fan of so much connectivity. I use it for research and to take messages. I don't much love it. It's a love-hate relationship. Or a like-hate relationship.

"Paranoia" touches on some important issues: income gaps, greed, health insurance. Were these what drew you to the film?
No. I was drawn to the character, and the manipulation of an ambitious young person by two powerful businessmen. And it was the opportunity to play a character different from what I've played lately. I haven't played the bad guy for a long time.

Did you do anything differently to get in a different mind-set?
I shaved my head. I shaved my hairline back and dyed my hair for "42." There was no way it was going to grow out in time to be useful. So I presented myself to Paramount people with a shaved head, much to their surprise.

You've been doing a lot more supporting and co-lead roles lately. Is that a way of getting rid of the burden of having to be the lead and carry a whole movie on your lonesome?
You have the ability when people complain to say, "Hey, I just work here. Take it up with the boss."

Is doing more character work a return to your earlier days?
No, it was no fun at all in my early days. I was playing smaller parts because I hadn't become certified at that point.

When working with younger actors, do you tend to give them advice?
[Chuckles] No, I don't give advice. It's neither appropriate nor very nice to walk onto a set telling people how to conduct their lives, their careers. So, no. I hope I'm collegial and friendly. I had a great time working with Liam [Hemsworth] and Gary [Oldman], the younger actors. Everybody's younger than I am.

There are still some actors older than you.
How many?

Back in the day

Before Han Solo

Back in 1969, well before he was known, Ford almost wound up playing the lead in French filmmaker Jacques Demy's first and only American film, "Model Shop."

"Jacques was a lovely guy," he says of the late director, most famous for "The Umbrellas of Cherbourg" musical. "He wanted to make this movie in Los Angeles. When you drove down Santa Monica Boulevard, you'd see these 'Live Nude Girls' signs for all kinds of weird stuff that was going on. He imagined a movie about a young man and a woman who worked in one of these places. We were friends and we researched it a bit. Jacques wanted me to star in it. And the studio, who was paying me $150 a week — and had all the respect for me that $150 a week implies — cast the film with Gary Lockwood while Jacques was up in San Francisco scouting locations. That was a shock to him. For me, it was just another indication that I was hanging my hat on the wrong peg."

Historical saga. “Lee Daniels’ The Butler” embraces complexity — and some casting silliness.

A bizarre copyright lawsuit has forced the makers of “The Butler” to put director Lee Daniels’ name in the title. The irony is that it’s the least “Lee Daniels” movie of the four he’s directed. Plowing through the career of Cecil (Forest Whitaker), an African-American man who served as White House butler from Eisenhower (Robin Williams) to Reagan (Alan Rickman), this film is not as crazy as past Daniels movies (certain casting choices aside). It’s more distinguishable as the work of Danny Strong, the screenwriter who reduced the presidential elections of 2000 (“Recount”) and 2008 (“Game Change”) into dubious HBO movie entertainments.

Strong’s script is similarly reductive in some ways yet, rather unexpectedly, intelligent in ways that actually count. Despite being a look at civil rights and race relations written by a white guy, this isn’t a history lesson made to comfort white liberals. It doesn’t even have a soothing, ready-made message. It’s a dialectic, exploring two warring approaches to race relations — not from the white side, but among African-Americans.

In one corner is Whitaker’s Cecil. He has decided the way to change things is quietly and subversively from within. In the other corner is Louis (David Oyelowo), Cecil’s son, who comes of age during the era of sit-ins. He believes in activism (if not the violent kind). Father and son clash mightily over their contradictory tactics to achieve the same goal.

Hey, it’s Robin Williams as Eisenhower (with Forest Whitaker) in “Lee Daniels’ The Butler.” / ANNE MARIE FOX

This is in no way subtle, but the key is that the film doesn’t pick a side. There are times when Cecil’s approach seems more appropriate, and times when it seems ineffective, even foolish. Ditto for Louis’ side. Ultimately thesis and antithesis form a wobbly synthesis, at which point the film collapses. But it’s refreshing to see a blunt history lesson embrace complexity at all.

Also importantly, this is still at least somewhat a Lee Daniels picture, which is a good thing. Daniels is a refreshingly sloppy, often zany filmmaker, whose “prestige” picture (“Precious”) is frothing mad in look and feel. Here he’s restrained, particularly compared to the absurdly lurid “The Paperboy” — but not that restrained. Only Daniels would think to cast John Cusack as Nixon (or “Hanoi” Jane Fonda as Nancy Reagan), though he makes himself known in more productive ways, chiefly in the forcefulness of the protest set pieces. A sit-in scene in a diner has a real force, while the more eccentric side of Daniels can be found in any scene where Oprah Winfrey, as Cecil’s long-suffering wife, gets drunk and rants or dances to “Soul Train.” Overall, Daniels is the perfect person to loosen up a script that can be as stiff as it is smart.

Ain't the title awful?

Artsy Western. "Ain't Them Bodies Saints" chops up a fantastic oater into incoherence.

Terrence Malick was an established master even before he even got around to his third movie. But he has curiously few copycats. For awhile, his only major protege was David Gordon Green, whose "George Washington" and "All the Real Girls" made like Malick and mixed lyrical montages with off-hand voiceovers. Now, there's David Lowery, who has applied the "Badlands" aesthetic to a script with which it doesn't quite fit.

For Lowery it's a form of self-abuse: He's the one who wrote the script he wrecked as a director. Casey Affleck plays Bob Muldoon, an outlaw who takes the fall for his girl, Ruth (Rooney Mara), who critically wounded an officer, Patrick (Ben Foster), during a shootout. Ruth remains free, giving birth to their child — and even starting a hesitant almost-relationship with Patrick. But Bob's love cannot be bound, and he escapes to reclaim what's his.

Somewhere on a series of external hard drives lies the footage for a terrific, beautifully acted neo-Western, where hard, grizzled truths sit side by side with a portrait of passion running right into cold reality. These are swallowed in the presentation, which keeps lathering up a montage-heavy storm. The film never calms down: It's all broad strokes and pomp, with a score that keeps insisting what we see is a larger-than-life murder ballad. Complex characters are easily reduced to types: The Outlaw who wanted His Girl but had to go through The Cop.

The casualties are the actors. Keith Carradine has never been better, weathered and rueful as a mysterious associate of Bob's who feels compelled to look after Ruth. But his work is cut to ribbons. In some cases, such a clash between material and direction would produce fascinating results (as in Malick films, in fact). But here, the script and actors seem to be doing something far more revelatory than the man directing them.

STEPHENIE MEYER
FILMMAGIC

Middle Earth is next for Meyer

Like most of us, Stephenie Meyer is "over" "Twilight."

"I get further away every day," she tells Variety. "I am so over it. For me, it's not a happy place to be." Meyer did concede, at least, that she could see herself giving some sort of update, but it might not be what fans are hoping for. "What I would probably do is three paragraphs on my blog saying which of the characters died," she says. "I'm interested in spending time in other worlds, like Middle Earth."

Talking point

Garner on paparazzi and her children

Jennifer Garner is joining Halle Berry in pushing for a bill that would make it illegal for paparazzi to photograph their children. "I chose a public life. My three children are private citizens," Garner said while testifying before the California State Assembly Committee on Public Safety in support of the proposed anti-paparazzi bill. "I love my kids... and I don't want a gang of shouting, arguing, lawbreaking photographers who camp out everywhere we are all day, every day, to continue traumatizing my kids."

Was 'Flowers in the Attic' real?

The good thing about your teenage fascination with "Flowers in the Attic" is that once you get a little older, you can laugh about it. The whole story's so outlandish that nothing like that could ever actually happen. Right?

Not so fast. In an interview with The Toast, Ann Patty, who was V.C. Andrews' editor, says the story behind "Flowers in the Attic" might actually have some truth to it. "'Flowers in the Attic' was based on a story [V.C. Andrews] heard when she was in the hospital for a spinal operation," she said. "Well, someone told it to her, yes. Some doctor there. So I'd guess that some aspects of it were true — at least the aspect of kids being hidden away. Whether the twins were real, the sex, the time frame, probably not. I think it was just the concept of kids hidden in the attic so the mother could inherit a fortune."

Oh, So just the torturous imprisonment is true. That makes us feel much better. — Melinda Taub

Simon Cowell cheated on Carmen Electra

Who cheats on the vision that is Carmen Electra? None other than Simon Cowell. (I picked this classic photo, left, of Paula Abdul to illustrate my feelings on this entire sordid affair.)

According to E! News, Electra caught him in flagrante delicto with the married Lauren Silverman, who is reportedly pregnant with his baby.

"Carmen was at Simon's house in L.A. when she literally busted him with Lauren," a source says. "Simon called her a friend, but there was nothing platonic about what was going on, if you know what I mean."

We know exactly what you mean. And it's so juicy! According to the source, Electra quickly called off her relations with Cowell.

"There was no way she was going to stick around and be a third wheel," the source says, probably because, you know, she's Carmen Electra.

Rumor has it that Skyler (with mom Rachel Zoe) is getting a baby brother. WIREIMAGE

A boy for Rachel Zoe?

It looks like baby number two for Rachel Zoe is going to be another boy, joining brother Skyler, 2.

"She has been telling everyone that she's having a boy — all her clients and friends know," the source tells Life & Style about the pregnant stylist. "She was joking that she really wanted a girl to take to couture shows and turn her into a fashionista!"

For some reason, I think both boys will be nothing but fierce.

COMPETITION

'Wipeout'

Oh, how far the pretty have fallen. In this episode, former beauty queens and pageant girls vie, not for a crown or sash designating them loveliest of all, but for the title of Miss Wipeout. This is probably a prime example of why young girls should not put all of their eggs in the "going to be Miss Universe one day" basket. AUG. 15, 8 P.M., ABC

'Strange Sex'

The title of this episode of one of the most deliciously freaky documentary-type shows on the tube is "160-pound Scrotum and Dominatrix in Training." They had us at "160-pound Scrotum." AUG. 18, 10:30 P.M., DFH

DRAMA

'True Blood'

What? It's already the finale? Time flies when you're having bloody-good fun. You know that sh— is going to go down in the sixth-season finale of — admittedly — one of the most increasingly ridiculous fantasy/dramas on TV. But we love it. AUG. 18, 9 P.M., HBO ALEXANDRA CAVALLO

Walking Papers plan on sticking around a while

Debut. Though the name of Duff McKagan's new band may suggest impermanence, he says this is the most accessible group he's ever played in.

Walking Papers issued their debut last week. / LOUD N PROUD RECORDS

When it comes to music, Seattle is the kind of city where everyone knows everyone and, at some point, everyone plays with everyone else. Take Walking Papers, a year-old heavy rock outfit whose self-titled debut album came out last week. The band includes bassist Duff McKagan (Guns N' Roses, Velvet Revolver), drummer Barrett Martin (Screaming Trees, Mad Season), and — a little less famously — vocalist and guitarist Jeff Angell and keyboardist Benjamin Anderson, both of the band Missionary Position. But, occasionally, local bigwigs like Alice in Chains's Jerry Cantrell and Pearl Jam's Mike McCready (the latter also plays on the album) jump onstage with them.

"It's always gone on," McKagan says of Seattle's band-hopping stew. "I grew up playing in bands here and came back in '93. There's always been this brother and sisterhood thing of sharing gear ... and sharing ideas."

Walking Papers started last year when Angell and Martin began jamming on the sultry whiskey-soaked blues rock songs that make up the album. Through his longtime friendship with both, McKagan came on board. The blond bassist is enthusiastic about WP.

"This band should be on the radio. It's the most commercial, accessible band I've ever been in," he says. "We're definitely going to do another record."

Uproar Fest

Through the summer, Walking Papers are headlining the Uproar Festival's second stage. The tour, headlined by Alice In Chains and Jane's Addiction, is ripe with potential guest guitarists. "We might survive Dave playing I guess," McKagan jokes dryly. "There's a lot of bands on the Uproar tour, so who knows. But Jeff is a competent guitarist. It's a mesmerizing thing as it is."

Onstage, all who wander are 'Lost'

Musical. It's your last weekend to catch this year's Shakespeare in the Park.

If you go

'Love's Labour's Lost'

Through Aug. 18
Delacorte Theater
Central Park West
Free, www.publictheater.org

The princess (Patti Murin, front left) and the king (Daniel Breaker) are would-be lovers and somewhat rivals in the new musical adaptation of "Love's Labour's Lost." / JOAN MARCUS

At a five-year college reunion, a group of young men on the verge of 30 have sworn to abandon their wanton ways in order to devote three years to studying, fasting and — gulp — celibacy, all to prepare for their fast-approaching adulthood. But can they make it through even one night when the visiting princess (Patti Murin) and her sassy handmaids come by on a vengeance quest to tempt and taunt the rambunctious former scholars in the cohort of her love-hate nemesis, the King of Navarre (Daniel Breaker)?

This is the last weekend to catch the reimagined, modernized "Love's Labour's Lost" that is closing out this year's Shakespeare in the Park run at the Delacorte Theater. The book was adapted for this musical by Alex Timbers, showcasing the same freewheeling fun and cheeky antics he embraced in both "Bloody Bloody Andrew Jackson" (dialogue and direction) and last year's hit, "Peter and the Starcatcher" (co-direction). The songs are care of Michael Friedman, who also worked on "Jackson." As always, tickets are free on a first-come, first-serve basis at the box office — or they are available by a lottery process online.

Although it was previously workshopped several times, "Lost" still has the carefree air of a play in progress, like something that we'd see at this month's Fringe Festival (although, to be fair, it would have a lot more gender-bending in that case). Although there are overarching themes — about maturity and scorned love, for example — those are credit to the Bard and not to Timbers or Friedman. What the creative duo adds are meandering thoughts that often lead to punch lines rather than poignancy. The songs — although deeply enjoyable, highly memorable and well performed — could be tighter, and the story tends to veer between brief spots of gravitas and unrelated, over-the-top antics. There's a hot tub. There's a ribbon dancer. There's a Segway.

But it's good fun. You'll laugh helplessly even if your brain isn't working too hard; the jokes shoot straight at the funny bone audiences wear on their sleeves when approaching Shakespeare's comedies in Central Park. You're outdoors, there's a light breeze, and in the background, Belvedere Castle looms like a perfectly chosen set piece against the sunset. The scenario is made for suspension of disbelief, for letting down your guard and letting loose — and "Love's Labour's Lost" taps that mood. Would it work on a bigger stage? For a lark, yes, but it would need a bit more work for this hilarious new musical comedy to be taken seriously.

Advice

Routine Machine

As a mom of twins, Reich had to learn how to manage and juggle like a pro. For back-to-school, she says a routine is vital.

How to beat the back-to-school blues

Pro tips. That early alarm clock will start ringing soon, so we asked an expert how parents can prepare.

Let the whining begin. The end of the summer can be difficult for parents whose kids dread returning to the classroom. Between shopping for school supplies, getting in an earlier bedtime routine and waking up on time for the bus, it can leave parents as well as kids feeling tired way before the bell rings on the first day of school.

There are easy ways to cut down on the struggles of back-to-school week, according to Barbara Reich, a professional organizer, author and mother of two. Her book, "Secrets of an Organized Mom," offers tips and personal parenting anecdotes to help break down the organization process in easy-to-manage steps.

What's the hardest routine for kids to get back into?
In the week before, you should try and re-establish a bedtime and a wake-up time so that kids aren't waking up two hours earlier than usual. The best thing to do with homework is to make it part of the routine, done in the same place at the same time every night after school. Even if they finish their homework, they can read a book or do something that's educational. Once they know that those are the rules, they'll fight you less. I think if kids have a string of successes, if they study and do well, then they are more apt to want to study and do well the next time.

For kids who have had behavioral issues in the past, how do you keep them from making the same mistakes?
Each year is a new year. The way your child responds to a teacher means there may be better chemistry some years than others. Every year is a fresh slate, and your child is one year older and one year more mature. If you feel like there have been behavioral issues, you sit your child down and say you're going to check in with their teacher. I'm not opposed to a little creative bribery.

Younger kids are using cell phones and social media now. Are there dos and don'ts for working parents who want to stay in touch with their kids?
My [kids'] school does allow cell phones during the day, and I wish it didn't. I don't feel like there's any reason why they need to get in touch with me during the day. Kids have cell phones at a younger and younger age, and it's a blessing and a curse for parents. I think the consensus among parents is we all hate social media, but we like being able to get in touch with our kids.

A résumé brush-up can make the empty nest easier, Reich says. / PROVIDED

What's your advice for stay-at-home parents who feel some withdrawal when their kids begin their education?
I remember when my kids first went to preschool and I felt sick inside. It was like somebody had cut out a piece of me, because I used to be with them all day. As a parent, you reinvent yourself many times. When you have that last child in school, it's a good time to brush up on your professional skills if you want to go back to work.

The beauty of sleep

Science. A new study proves a lack of sleep increases signs of aging.

There's a reason why Sleeping Beauty had that name. / GETTY IMAGES, CREATAS RF

Wonder why you're seeing lines on your face at 27 — or why those sunspots take forever to disappear? It might be time to skip a party or two and get a full night's sleep.

The saying "get your beauty rest" has never rang truer than now, thanks to a new study commissioned by Estee Lauder. The beauty giant teamed up with scientists at University Hospitals Case Medical Center to examine the skin conditions of 60 poor sleepers. The findings: For the first time ever, a study reveals that a lack of sleep causes skin to age faster.

"Our study is the first to conclusively demonstrate that inadequate sleep is correlated with reduced skin health. Sleep-deprived women show signs of premature skin aging and a decrease in their skin's ability to recover after sun exposure," says Dr. Elma Baron, director of the Skin Study Center at UH Case Medical Center.

With this newfound knowledge, Estee Lauder went back into the lab. This month they launched their new Advanced Night Repair Synchronized Recovery Complex II, a potent serum that boosts Catabolysis, the skin's natural nighttime cellular repair process, or the reason you wake up with fresh and healthy-looking skin in the mornings.

Make it part of your nightly ritual — in addition to eight hours of beauty sleep, of course.

Covet. Margiela rings that double as finger armor are a must

The statement necklace has ruled the past few years. But gradually brands are moving attention (and the eye) toward our fingers instead — not to mention they're the parts of the body 9-to-5 office workers see the most of during the day.

These rings from Maison Martin Margiela are designed to overlap over the finger, covering each joint like armor, and will most likely make working on that PowerPoint presentation a lot more fun.

WHEN OPPOSITES ATTRACT: THE RULES OF HATE-SEX

It's OK if there's a love/hate relationship in your bed as long as you follow the rules. / GETTY IMAGES

You've been there. You want to have sex with someone, but it's surprising because they actually repulse you. Perhaps you're lusting for your significant other's most annoying friend or your horrible boss. Or maybe you're having steamy fantasies about that annoying co-worker with the grating voice. Wouldn't it be great if we could control our sexual attraction? We are 100 percent in command and responsible for our actions, but desire often catches us unaware.

Hate-sex is sexual activity between two or more people who don't like each other. The arousal involves someone you purportedly find revolting — it is about repression.

"Only five nights ago he had contemplated smashing her skull in with a cobblestone — but that was of no importance. He thought of her naked, youthful body, as he had seen it in his dream."

That excerpt is from George Orwell's book "1984," written in the 1940s. Yep, the joys of hate-sex are timeless! But the rules for hate-sex aren't exactly obvious. Take a look ...

Dos and don'ts

- DO have at it. Sleep with them if you both determine that it's the right path and doing so causes no harm to yourselves or others. It may be the worst sex of your life. Or the emotionally unbridled humping could release a flood of passion you have never before experienced. You owe it to yourselves to find out!
- DON'T confuse sex and rape. If you genuinely hate someone and view sex as a means to harm or punish them without consent, that's criminal. Really: Acting on that thought is likely illegal.
- DO dig deeper into the unresolved conflict. What is it about the object of your desire that makes you hate them? Think about the qualities triggering your loathing and examine the emotions pegged to that hatred. For example, perhaps their vulgarity pisses you off because you secretly wish to live as explicitly as they do. Psychological repression is a slippery little sucker. Uncover what lies beneath it.
- DO realize sexual behavior encompasses a wide swath of activity, including masturbation. If acting on your carnal impulses would be socially messy or inappropriate, just fantasize and jam out by yourself.
- DO understand hate-sex is not the same as hating sex. The physical, emotional and psychological benefits of getting it on are valid. If you're not having a good time with it, try something or someone else.

The Whitney Museum of American Art

At the Whitney Museum of American Art, Untitled — another Danny Meyer inspiration — has racked up raves for its fare. Its seasonal farm-to-table menu ranges from a chicken chorizo burger to cedar-roasted salmon with mango, snow peas and quinoa pilaf. Stop by for fueling before — or after — a trip to see the Edward Hopper exhibit, open through Oct. 6.

A museum and a meal

Exhibits. These spots have great food as well as amazing art.

New York City is dotted with museums, but walking around them for hours can be exhausting for an art lover. Sometimes after — or before — a long afternoon of perusing art, you just need a good meal. Fortunately, New York's food scene is here to help. After featuring Chef Ali Loukzada, the executive chef at the Rubin Museum of Art, as a "Hot Chef," we were inspired to craft a list of the best ways to grab grub in city art spots.

Robert on top of the Museum of Arts and Design does justice to its funky museum setting with purple-backed seating, amber yellow lighting and neon pink chair covers. The food is just as dynamic. Choose a few things to share — maybe a tuna carpaccio pizza made with caviar —or order seared halibut in a sunchoke puree with snow peas. During the meal, soak in the views of Central Park.

After browsing through 20th century German and Austrian art at the Neue Galerie, stop in for a special experience at the museum's Cafe Sabarsky. The cafe's decor is curated, too — the lighting fixtures are by designer Josef Hoffmann and the furniture is by Austrian architect Adolf Loos. Sit on banquettes upholstered with an Otto Wagner fabric from 1912. The restaurant also hosts classical and cabaret performances. The food includes salmon and crepes and, of course, some regional fare, with a Bavarian ham and cheese plate on the menu as well as wiener schnitzel and goulash.

The New-York Historical Society aims to bring the nation's history alive, and its restaurant, Caffe Storico, provides an elegant setting to discuss what you learned. Plates line the walls, and chandeliers hang from the ceilings. Dishes go by the small-plate tradition, but you can also order pastas. Pair with a glass from the wine list, which only features Italian wines. Or — this is not on the menu — you can order Storico's summer drink, The Juniper Julep, inspired by the 1930s-themed summer exhibit "Swing Time." It combines gin, lemon and honey from the Bee's Knees and mint from the Julep classic to create a mix of gin, brandy and benedectine, with lemon juice and honey syrup.

For many, The Morgan Library and Museum is a hidden gem in the city — a gorgeous building with enchanting ceilings and painted walls. Add the Morgan Dining Room to its special status. Offering brunch, lunch and cocktails, the menu harkens back to early 20th century cuisine in the city, and guests eat in the original Morgan family dining room. Brunch includes breakfast classics like eggs with smoked salmon, or stop by for a filet of fluke or lobster salad for a lavish lunch.

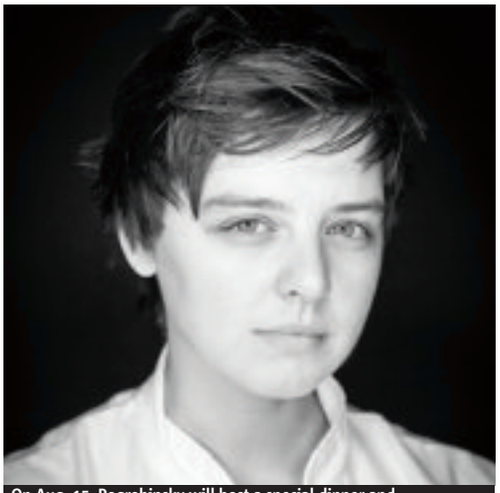
Chef fires up Queens food scene

Hot chef. Natasha Pogrebinsky might have been "Chopped," but her restaurant is picking up steam.



On Aug. 15, Pogrebinsky will host a special dinner and viewing party of her "Chopped" episode at Bear (12-14 31 Ave., Long Island City, 917-396-4939). / MICHAEL RUDIN

With a recent appearance on Food Network's "Chopped" (she placed second), Natasha Pogrebinsky, founder and chef at the Long Island City restaurant Bear, is placing her borough on the New York food map. By showcasing experimental dishes and drinks out of vodka and pickles, the Ukraine-born chef proves that it's not just Manhattan chefs who have interesting ideas to offer on the culinary front.

Why did you decide on Queens?
I've worked in different restaurants since I was 16 years old. So in 2011, I felt it was the time to actually [start my own] and it was a great opportunity to open one in Queens. Astoria is changing. It's becoming this kind of new undiscovered land. [It's like] Disneyland.

How you did decide on the name Bear?
Our parents still live in Cleveland, Ohio, where my brother Sasha (the restaurant's other founder) and I grew up. There are little wooden bear statues on I-80 at rest areas all through Pennsylvania. We used to stop there and pet them for good luck when we visited. Two years ago we were traveling to Ohio and decided these statues always brought us luck; bears are a symbol of Russian culture, bears are good eaters. It's easy to remember and it's a fun and intriguing name for a restaurant.

What's the response been from the community after hearing about "Chopped"?
When the show was announced three weeks ago we were booked in, like, the first 20 minutes. People are calling from all over the country booking tastings. And I really hope that this will put Queens on the food map. It is what I have been trying to do since we opened. It was one of the first Queens restaurants to be on the heat map (of hot new restaurants). Still, I hold on to the ethnic roots of Russia and [mix that with] the homely atmosphere that is so typical for Queens.

Cocktail of the week

We are such suckers for anything reminiscent of the '20s (why do you think we were first on line to see the "Gatsby" flick, hmm?) That's why we're super-jazzed about this weekend's annual Jazz Age Lawn Party on Governor's Island, an excuse to dust off our flapper costume and do the Lindy Hop. Naturally, we'll be sipping this in between songs.

The St. Germain Cocktail
2 parts Brut Champagne or Dry Sparkling Wine
1.5 parts St. Germain
2 parts club soda
Method: Stir ingredients in a tall ice-filled Collins glass, mixing completely. Garnish with a lemon twist.

Boardwalk. Caesars' Atlantic City properties are getting serious about eating local.

You may not be able to order your favorite dish at one of the restaurants at Caesars, Bally's, Showboat or Harrah's this weekend — it depends what was caught that day. The four casino-hotels, part of Caesars Entertainment Corp., are focusing on fresh, locally produced fare for "Garden State to Plate," their Jersey-centric take on farm-to-table.

For executive chef Keith Mitchell, who oversees the restaurants at Caesars and Bally's, it's nothing new. "I've been doing locally sourced my whole career," he told Metro last weekend, when we stopped by Atlantic Grill at Caesars to take in the panoramic views of the boardwalk and beach. We also sampled the chef's fava bean sweet pea tortellini and house-made mozzarella with warmed sungold tomatoes.

The ingredients we gobbled up came from the 40-acre Masters Organic Farm in nearby Galloway. Masters provides produce exclusively for the Caesars properties, which means Mitchell gets to put in requests for what's planted.

He has a similar relationship with fish and game suppliers.

"[The fishermen] will go out for clams, and I'll get a message at 5 a.m. saying they also caught swordfish. And then we'll design the menu around that," he said.

With New York, Pennsylvania and Delaware offering gambling, Atlantic City has been making a push to bring in money from restaurants and retail, not just slots and tables — and it seems to be working, Mitchell said.

The majority of diners at Atlantic Grill and next-door Nero's Tuscan Steakhouse are not gamers. People are now coming just to eat, and Mitchell wants to make sure they eat well.

The city and the casinos used to just "throw money at everything," he said. "But people are paying more attention to what they eat and where it comes from. You have to be smart. You have to be thoughtful about what you're putting on the menu."

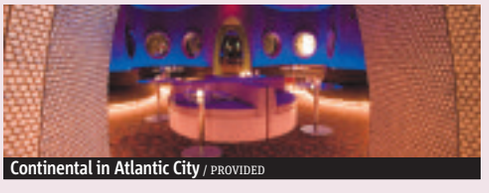
Celebrity chefs

Philly connection

Restaurateur Stephen Starr is partially behind Atlantic City's transformation into a foodie town, Chef Mitchell said. When Starr brought two of his most popular Philadelphia spots, Buddakan (also in New York) and Continental, to the Pier Shops at Caesars, people started to realize there's a market for it. Of course, bringing in celebrity chefs like Bobby Flay and Jose Garces, who have restaurants in The Borgata and Revel, doesn't hurt either.



Continental in Atlantic City / PROVIDED

A few more "big name" celebrity chefs are planning to debut restaurants in A.C., Mitchell said — but he's "not at liberty" to give us the scoop on exactly who just yet.

Calif. needs to reconsider its electric avenues

Re: 'California pushes to "bottle sunlight" in energy storage' (Metro, Aug. 13) California Gov. Jerry Brown wants to store solar and wind energy for the days when the wind does not blow and the sun does not shine. "Bottle the sunshine," he calls it. Unfortunately he does not understand basic electricity. Only alternating current can travel on high-tension lines, but only direct current can be stored in batteries, and most electronic devices require AC. Of course it is possible to convert AC to DC and DC to AC, but with each conversion there is power loss of about 30 percent.

Jets vs. Jaguars: Position battles to keep an eye on

NFL. Plenty of questions still abound as the Jets face the Jaguars in preseason Week 2.

Here we go again — another preseason game and another chance for the Jets to sort out the questions all over their roster. From quarterback to depth issues in the backfield and at wide receiver — not to mention all the new names on defense — Aug. 17's game is all about getting answers with Week 1 just a couple weeks away.

We look at three things to watch for in the game (7:30 p.m., NFLN/CBS2):

1 Ivory's impact
With Mike Goodson still not in training camp and the season-ending knee injury to John Griffin last week, the Jets still need to sort through the issues in their backfield. Joe McKnight has had a rough go of it in training camp, with everything from dehydration to legal matters, and a recent head injury means he likely won't play against the Jags. But the Jets do get back Chris Ivory, who was acquired in an offseason trade, and he should be a nice complement to Bilal Powell in the rotation.

2 More from wideouts
The continued rehabilitation of Santonio Holmes from last year's Lisfranc injury is well-trod turf, and his inability to return to the field to date means there is plenty of competition at wide receiver. Clyde Gates took a significant step forward this offseason, and it showed in Detroit when he put up three catches for 39 yards. In addition, Ben Obomanu and undrafted rookie Zach Rogers both made strong statements.

3 Defensive depth
The first-team defense looks solid for the Jets and could be a top unit in the league, but after the first choice players, there is precious little depth. The safety position needs sorting out, and Jaiquawn Jarrett has been working with the starters this week. At linebacker, Ricky Sapp struggled last week with penalties, and depth at nose tackle needs help with Damon Harrison and Junior Aumavae failing to claim the position to date.

No Geno?

Ryan won't commit to playing Smith

Geno Smith went from the likely starter in preseason Week 2 last week to a question mark as to whether he will play at all.

Head coach Rex Ryan wouldn't commit to playing Smith, who is practicing despite an ankle injury.

"I don't think he's close to 100 percent," Ryan said. "We have a few more days.

"We're hoping that Geno is able to play and Mark [Sanchez] is able to play, and that everything is the way we originally planned. But again, our plans could alter." METRO

Giants vs. Colts: Three storylines you should watch

NFL. The battle at linebacker will be the top competition in the preseason home opener.

Former Giants running back Ahmad Bradshaw should see some playing time for the Colts. / GETTY IMAGES

The Giants are preparing for their preseason home opener against the Colts on Aug. 18. And while the Colts' young phenom quarterback, Andrew Luck, will likely see limited action, there's still plenty of tests for Big Blue to pass as it creeps toward the preseason finish line.

We look at three things to watch for in the game (7 p.m., FOX):

1 More 3-4 defense
It'll be interesting to see what adjustments offensive line coach Pat Flaherty and offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride made during the week as they see their second straight 3-4 defense. After not playing last week, Chris Snee's return should help on that front.

2 Old friend
The Colts also have a familiar face that recently came off the PUP list: former Giants running back Ahmad Bradshaw. While it's unknown how much playing time the veteran will get, Bradshaw is highly competitive and would undoubtedly enjoy playing against the team that released him in the offseason.

3 Linebacker logjam
Head coach Tom Coughlin acknowledged there's a logjam at linebacker following last week's game, as no one stood out in practice or game film. While Spencer Paysinger had an admirable performance last week, no other linebacker had more than three tackles.

REAL TESTIMONIAL
For 5 months I tried with other Psychic to get my girlfriend back, but they all failed and I never saw results, a friend of mine told me how Mr SHAMAN helped his grandmother get rid of an evil spirit that was haunting her house, so I decided to give it a last try and i visited Mr SHAMAN in his temple, he got my girlfriend back to my side in less than a weekend, I have never been more happy in my life, she is living with me again and I can see the joy in her smile every morning. Mr SHAMAN I thank you for your honestly and for your powerful spell and all the guidance and support you gave me.
